Welcome letter

AUTHORIZED ACCESS

Agent:

This letter formally confirms your appointment to RobArte, the unit specialising in the investigation of art theft. From this moment on, you will have access to our confidential case files: impossible disappearances, monitored rooms, apparently sealed escape routes and suspects who always seem to have an explanation.

Do not trust appearances.

A convincing alibi may conceal a contradiction. Suspects may lie, omit information or reveal only the part of the truth that suits them. The smallest detail can solve a case, while the most striking clue may lead you in the wrong direction.

Your mission is to reconstruct what happened and determine who committed the theft, which object they used and how they escaped. The numbered clues have been verified by the Unit and are reliable. If a statement must be interpreted in a particular way, the case file will say so explicitly.

A ORDER: START WITH CASE FILES MARKED WITH A SINGLE A.

Observe. Eliminate. Connect each clue. And remember: when everything seems obvious, you probably have not yet seen the whole picture.
